GRADUATE PROFILE
Seth Seward class of 2023

Seth is a registered nurse on Cardiothoracic Surgery Progressive Care Unit at VCU Medical Center in Richmond, Virginia. He says he chose Longwood University for its small class size, direct entry to nursing, and Longwood's devotion to creating citizen leaders. "In addition to the many nursing courses offered, the department allows their students opportunities to engage in professional and community service activities. Students were able to administer COVID vaccines during the height of the pandemic, conduct sports physicals for local youths, help tutor younger nursing students, and assist coordinating blood drives. The professors genuinely love interacting with their students, and their support throughout my four years here at Longwood made a world of difference."
"I could sense that Longwood was special since the first time I stepped foot on campus. Between the lectures about citizen leadership, scrolling through LancerLink to see the hundreds of clubs/orgs to choose from, and seeing the proud organizations of National Pan-Hellenic Council welcome and offer help to minority students, Longwood is truly a home for anyone. Connection is everywhere at Longwood - you just have to go out and grab it."

GRADUATE PROFILE
Georgia Gagliardi class of 2023

Georgia is currently working at the Level 1 Trauma Center at Chippenham Hospital in Richmond, Virginia in the Medical Surgical Trauma Intensive Care Unit. Georgia says deciding to join the Longwood nursing family as a freshman was the best decision she has ever made. Longwood nursing allowed her to grow as a person, student and leader in so many ways. She also says that the program prepared her beyond measure for her first RN job as a new graduate. She says, "this is all due to the outstanding, passionate, loving and caring professors that never gave up on me throughout my four years in the program and pushed me to be better every day. Throughout the program you are able to make connections and friendships that are so unique to the small nursing program and classes. These friendships are the reason you'll get through long nights of studying, hard days at clinical and the everyday struggles of being a college student. You don't get this experience anywhere else but at the Longwood nursing program. During my time in the program I was able to hold leadership positions that allowed me to gain critical skills that are vital to the nursing career such as delegation and communication, being the Treasurer for the National Nursing Honor Society and the President of the Nursing Class Council". Georgia is so thankful for the opportunities she was given as a Longwood nursing student. She believes those opportunities helped her land her first RN job.
